

Honors English 1302

Honors English will take a thematic approach to course materials instead of a genre-based approach. For example, instead of separate units on fiction, drama, and poetry, course units will include literary selections from several genres that examine themes such as the effects of colonialism or gender issues. Students will help select the focus of some units. The thematic approach will allow students to discover how issues change or develop over the years. Quizzes/busywork will be kept to a minimum, and class participation - such as group work or panel discussions - will constitute a larger portion of the grade.
